FEDERATION SQUARE

Federation Square is unusual aspect of architecture with an irregular, almost crystalline form. From within the edges of the building, the facade and the framing of the Atrium, have a degree of complexity and particularity, and thrust themselves to a sharp focus as you approach and enter the space.

Street Art is an important forum for social commentary, free expression and identity statements.

It is the reclaiming of public spaces and represents the efforts of individuals trying to form the city surface just as architects, urban planners, builders, advertising agencies and others do.
